One of the most telling things about film school was that there were a lot of students wandering around. They said, "Oh, I wish I were in a production class. I can't get in that class. I can't make a movie."

The first class I had was an animation class, not a production class. They gave us one minute of film to put into the animation camera. I took that one minute of film and made it into a movie. It was a movie that won about 25 awards in film festivals around the world and changed the whole animation department. It is important that you have passion about what you do and do your best no matter what the situation is. Your passion can open a door for you as the animation class did for me.

Everybody has talent, and it's just a matter of moving around until you've discovered what it is. A talent is a combination of something you love enough to lose yourself in and something that you have a natural ability to do very well. Usually, those two things go together. However, a lot of people like to do certain things only to find they're not very good at them.

Keep going through the things that you like to do until you find something that you are actually extremely good at. It can be anything. There are lots of different things out there. You just need to find the right one for you.

The idea of a wedding cake is common throughout the world. Many countries have their own traditional cakes: fruitcake in Ireland, wedding bread in Ukraine, and almond cake decorated with sugar work in Denmark are a few examples. Originally, the wedding cake was not eaten by the bride: it was thrown at her! People thought that throwing cake at a bride would bring her fertility. It started with throwing wheat, which came to take the form of little cakes. Later, the cakes were piled on top of each other, a higher pile meaning more prosperity for the couple. (a) _____, a French chef thought of the multilayered cake that is common in Western cultures today.

Throwing things at the couple to wish them fertility or prosperity is also common throughout different cultures. People throw peas in the Czech Republic, and it's sweets and nuts in Romania. Americans traditionally threw rice at couples as they left the wedding place. As they learned that the rice was making birds sick, (b) _____, they began throwing birdseed, which unfortunately injured some brides and grooms. Therefore, Americans today often blow bubbles or throw confetti, a mix of small pieces of colored paper. The word confetti comes from an Italian word meaning "sweetmeats," which refers to the mixed nuts, dried fruit, and honeyed almonds Italians throw at the newlyweds to symbolize the sweet and bitter parts of life.

The rain had stopped. The sky was gray. Thick clouds hung in the sky. The two men could hear the sound of water from the streams. Earl and his father did not talk until they got to the muddy road. Ahead of them was their house. It was a wooden cabin that badly needed paint. The father slowed down.

“You can go to Detroit,” the father said. Then he asked, “Are you going to see your brothers?”

“I guess so,” Earl answered.

“Tell them to write once in a while. Your mother likes to get letters.”

“I’ll tell them.”

The father went into the yard. Earl followed him. His father waited for a moment at the front door. Then they entered the house together.

Dolphins seem to enjoy performing for the public. And they and other sea mammals do so at marine shows each year. People are continually amazed to see a dolphin recover a tiny marble from the bottom of a huge tank. People also constantly marvel at how dolphins can find their way blindfolded through a maze of upright poles. Some dolphins have even been known to rescue lost divers. A super sonar system helps them accomplish all these feats.

Dolphins are also patient animals. This makes it easy for scientists to study them. Knowledge gained from these studies is being used in many ways. _____, sonar devices for sightless people are now being tested. These devices are based on echolocation.
